

Bespoke windows for eclectic mix of housing designs in rural Wye

Black Millwork's one-stop shop

When FDC Homes wanted to develop a housing development that offered an eclectic mix of traditional and modern housing designs, they turned to Black Millwork for a wide range of bespoke windows, giving each home a unique stamp and a feeling of exclusivity.

Situated in rural Wye, Havilands comprises 57 residential houses, which are currently under construction by FDC Homes. It incorporates a meadow behind the properties, in addition to a lake area for residents to relax in.

The site was developed in five phases, with three already completed and the final two due for completion in under two years time.

The Andersen Flexiframe has helped add a unique stamp to each of the Havilands properties through special tailor made designs.

Made-to-measure Flexiframe allows any straight-edged window to be custom-made to any shape and size, providing an infinite assortment of designs.

Flexiframe enables the glazing to be taken right up to the eaves, opening up space and producing a striking statement piece, creating an infinite assortment of shapes and designs. Also included in the selection was the Andersen 400 casement window, along with the Andersen Woodwright window.

With slender profiles and classic good looks, both windows possess excellent energy performance levels and low maintenance costs. They also feature Perma-shield, an innovative system which protects the exterior of a window for decades, eliminating the need to paint, resulting in significant financial savings.

To complete Black Millwork's impressive specification were the Frenchwood doors, specified in both the out-swing and in-swing format. Enjoying the same inherent benefits as the windows, the Frenchwood doors also incorporate patented hinges with ball bearing pivots for frictionless movement and are BBA accredited for their strength, durability and performance.

Darren Kingston, lead developer at FDC homes comments: "Black Millwork was the ideal one-stop shop for this project, enabling us to utilise its immense portfolio to fulfil the different designs and configurations required. It provided quality products, which have added a unique and bespoke twist to each property at Havilands."
